LAME NANNIE'S CHRISTMAS TREE.

By "Virginia."

CHAPTER VII.—SOMETHING HAPPENS.

"What's your name?" asked Nannie, and then Donold gave an account of his hard life at the poor-farm, and of how he came to be where he was.

"Did he get drunk?" asked Nannie in a whisper.

"The master."
"N—o: I don't know," said Donald.
"Oh. I guess he did," said Nannie,
"cause that's what makes people bad."
"Nannie, will you let me stay here all night?"

night?"
"I'll have to tell Janet first. Wait till papa goes away after dinner an' I'll—" Suddenly she stopped, listened a minute, gave him a warning poke, and slipped indoors, and a few minutes after a man's eavy tread was heard.

And then came the delicious smell of

And then came the delicious smell of frying sausages; then such a long, long wait, it seemed to the hungry boy to be a month of afternoons turned into one. By and by it grew dark, and not once had the calico curtain been drawn from the window, and Donald was beginning to think wouldn't it be better to slip away, when a stealthy sound was heard, and a handful of cold buscuit, and colder sausage, was thrust against his nose.

"—sh" said a soft voice, and that was all.

"-sh" said a soft voice, and that was all.

It didn't take that food long to disappear. Then Donald pulled the old carpet close about him, and was soon asleep.

When he awoke the boat was rocking, and when he peeped his nose out he became aware that a high wind was blowing and that there was no sign of the familiar hills. He reached up to pull the carpet closer about him, when, horror of horrors! somebody grabbed hold the other end, and before he knew what had happened the whole carpet was jerked out on "deck," and he rolled without the least bit of ceremony right at a man's feet.

For a moment a look of astonishment greeted the frightened boy. Then in a tone of anger the man exclaimed: "You miserable little vagabond!" And picking up a rope lying near, he raised it high just as a little figure flew out of the cabin, threw its arms protectingly about the boy, and cried: "Oh papa, don't hurt my poor little half-froze boy."

But the rope fell as the child began to speak, and fell across the back of poor little lame Nannie. With a cry of horror the father grabbed her to him; but she knew the blow was not meant for her, and sobbed out, "It don't hurt, papa, not so very bad." And holding her close to his bosom, the father carried her into the cabin, and in a few minutes the young lady with the soft pretty eyes came out and said to Donald, "Come in, little boy." And that's the way Donald got his first boat ride.

Paris, December 1, noon.—The Official Ga-ette publishes the withdrawal of the resignation of the Rouvier Cabinet. The withdrawal was made at the request of Presiden WANTS FERRY. The Journal des Debats advocates the elec

A POLITICAL VOLCANO.

The Situation in France-A Spirit of Revotion in Paris.

A. J. JORDAN, 612 Washington Av. CHICAGO, Ill., December 1 .- A special corespondent of the Chicago Daily News telegraphs from Paris under yesterday's date as ollows: "It is impossible to test the temper of the French mind to-night. If you accept appearances you will decide that the Republic is safe. Depending on analogy, history and what experienced European observers say, you will conclude that the political volcano is about to emit its borrors. While the tendencies are revolutionary, though one finds in the situation hope that calmer judgment will prevail. The Radicals, who are at the bottom of the trouble, are on the run. It looks as though Clemenceau's effort to pull down the pillar of the Temple would be frustrated. The Radicals, even fire-eaters like Rochefort and destructionists like Deroulede, have abandoned the conspiracy to overthrow Grevy under a pretense of wiping out Governmental shame and scandal. Alarmed by the onscious boost they had given their great mortal enemy, Ferry, they are now offering their support to Grevy.

Paris is calm, but it is a calm which causes distrust on the part of the authorities, and precautions have been redoubled. Eight iments of cavalry are held in readiness at ersailles. Yesterday and to-day the streets were placarded in all directions with posters which were torn down as fast as possible by the police. These read:

"PEOPLE OF PARIS! "THE REPUBLIC IS IN DANGER.

"The Congress is about to name Grevy's successor at Versallies. There is a monstrons conspiracy to deliver the country to Ferry, conspiracy to deliver the country to Ferry, the famine breeder; to Ferry the Tonquinots; to Ferry the valet of Bismarck. Republicans of all shades, Socialists or revolutionaries, shall we allow such a crime to be perpetrated? No! A thousand times no! Blood must not flow needlessly, but we will not recoil before any sacrifice to save France from being represented by the meanest of traitors. Citizens, let us be ready and watchful. The Republic is in danger."

There was great excitement in the corridors of the Chambers when M. Mayer, Director of La Lanterne, and Booksfort declared that they would begin a campaign in Grevy's favor. "I had rether leep an old servent."

exclaimed Bochefort, "who robs me, than to I allowed her it at first because I knew her take a new one who will out my throat."

Paul De Cassagnac writes to-day that the situation is changing from day to day, almost Yesterday the Radicals had chosen De Frey finet as their champion against Ferry; to-day here may be still another change. Strangely nough, Ferry is Floquet's uncle by marriage. Ferry will poll 300 to 340 votes; De Freycinet weaker candidate, like Sadie Carnot or Brisably Ferry will lack eighty to one hundred Trafalgar square. THE CHANGES.

PARNELUS INCOGNITO.

His Friends to Retaliate on the Times—The Thackeray Fuss.

Special Cablegram to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, December 1.—In a talk with a leadng member of the Nationalist party on the subject of the Times setting spies on Parnell and finding him living incognito in the village of Brockley in Kent under the name of Preston he told me that Parnell is in a delicate state of health, extremely thin and pale. He had a perfect right to seek repose while Parliament is not sitting. He was not surprised at the conduct mined to retaliate and a watch will be set on the private movements of the Times' writers I fancy this will prove rather awkward journalists who, in spite of high professions in public, would shrink from such an ordeal. The Times has only disovered a mare's nest. Parnell is leading a quiet, respectable life. The spying is condemned with remarkable unanimity, even latter makes the discovery rather late that Parnell is a gentleman, entitled to be treated as such. Perhaps misgivings respecting this fresh departure is the real meaning sympathy with Parnell.

THE THACKERAY FUSS. Mr. Brookfield now says his mother offered the Thackeray letters in the first instance to Smith, Elder & Co., who did not believe they would interest the general public or add to Thackeray's reputation. then obtained from Thackeray's daughshe was entitled to give such authority, full permission to publish the letters, and ranged with the Scribners, who left her all the rights to the English edition. Smith, Elder & Co. then disthe English overed the public interest in the letters and made arrangements with the Scribners, but uch an arrangement was not that anticipated by the Scribners. The Scribners, therefore, had to alter the proposal to Mrs. Brookfield wing to the terms they were compelled t make with Smith, Elder & Co., but, under the circumstances, Mrs. Brookfield was amply satisfied by the Scribners.

The Case Against Robert Geers for Train Wrecking to Be Dropped. By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

Kansas City, Mo., December 1.—The case of KANAAS CITT, Mo., December 1.—The case of bort Geers, the alleged Wyandotte train-recker, was to have been brought up in the Wyandotte District Court on Monday next. Prosecuting Attorney Cree said this morning that the case would not be tried, as the State recognized the impossibility of convicting the man in Wyandotte County. He said there were not enough voters in the county from which to select a competent jury, as was demonstrated in the examination of talesmen in the preceding train-wrecker case. Another point in favor of Geers is the law that prohibits the holding of a prisoner without trial over three terms of court. Geers, Leary and Lloyd have now been awaiting trial for three terms. The Missouri Pacific has spent a small fortune in trying to prove these men guilty, and will not squander any more in the attempt to convict them.

notary public and then presented to the Receiver who examines and approves or disallows it.

THE FINAL PROOF

on which the dividend is paid, however, is on the books of the bank as they are certified to the Comptroller. If by any chance a certificate of the Comptroller. If by any chance a certificate is excessive, the dividend is not paid on the certificate, but on the statement of the account as it appears on the books of the bank. This mistake could only occur through the act of a claimant in swearing falsely to the amount of his claim. It is not likely that any of the bank's creditors will make themselves liable to a penitontiary sentence by swearing falsely to the amounts of their claims. When the claim is proved on the books of the bank and the receiver has cash enough on hand to pay a dividend, the Comptroller will declare a dividend on the claims and send to the Receiver checks for the various amounts due claimants on the dividend declared. This dividend may be expected about the time that the Receiver's suit against the Directors is brought up for trial.

The suit against the Directors to be brought by Receiver Stephens attracts some attention in financial circles because it is one of a series of suits pending against bank directors. The Supreme Court has now under consideration the case of a Buffaio bank, the Directors of the Fidelity Bank of Cincinnati are being sued and now the Directors of the Fifth National are about to be brought up.

In asking that the Buffaio bank case be advanced on the Supreme Court dooket, the Comptroller said:

DOURTS ABOUT DIRECTORS' LIABILITIES.

'In support of the request I have the honor to say that I regard it exceedingly important that the Supreme Court should lay down at the earliest day practicable the principles upon which the responsibilities of bank directors are to be measured and enforced.

'Of national banks alone there are also quite a number of State and savings banks. The stockholders and depositors in these various institutions are entitled to know to what importance that the present state of uncertainty should be terminated and that conclusive judgment should be rendered upon the points in controversy.

"I believe that the case cited above involves the most important and the most fundamental of the issues awaiting determination."

CASHER CRECELIUS called on the Receiver this morning. He wanted to get a picture, a gold pen and some other little things belonging to him which he had left in his desk. His old egodism got the better of him when the Receiver told him he had collected $100,000 for the bank.

"If I had been here," said Crecelius, "Is would have been $200,000."

The hall on several occasions has contained 7,000 people. The Republican Convention of 1876, at which Hayes was nominated, and the convention which selected Hancock as the Democratic standard-bearer in 1880, was held in this hall. It is believed that the hotel accommodations are ample. The committee which will go to Washington think that 50,000 people can easily be taken care of by the hotels and boarding houses in the three cities of Cincinnati, Newport and Covington. A. G. BALTIMORE, November 25.—No organized effort has been made by either of the political parties to have their national conventions held here, but considerable influence, in a private way, has been brought to bear in favor of faltimore as the meeting place. Its central location makes it most acceptable, as well as most acceptable, as well as most acceptable, to all sections, and its fame as the home of hospitality is a guarantee that the delegates and their friends would be treated with a gonulue Maryland welcome. The hotel accommodations are of the very best, and fully equal to any demand made upon them. There are several halls and theaters large enough for the convention, notably the Flith Regiment Armory and Ford's Grand Operahouse. It was in Ford's that Horace Greeley was nominated in 1872. At that time all the delegates were seated on the first floor with several hundred seats to spare. The galieries in Ford's will seat from two to three thousand more. The committees meet in the basement, which is now handsomely fitted up and divided off into large apartments. The armory is one immense hall, with a galiery entirely endireling it. If neither of these places answer the purpose there is still the Academy of Music left, which is one of the handsomest as well as one of the largest public halls in the city. Its seating capacity is 2,800.

Senator Gorman will make a bold fight for Baltimore for the Democratic Convention, with what success remains to be seen. He is using every influence to bring the delegates here and is now in correspondence with many of the leading committeemen on the subject. Stevenson Archer, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, said that everything would be done at the proper time to bring the Democratic Convention here. "The initial test of Cleveland's indorsement by t

AFTER THIRTEEN CONTINUANCES

Samuel J. Tannehill's Case Disposed of-Queer Charges and a Queer Case.

Another beautiful exemplification of the law's delay is contained in the case of Samue J. Tannehill, who was discharged in the Court of Criminal Correction to-day. The record in the case is simply disgraceful and enough to disgust anybody with the methods of dealing out justice peculiar to St. Louis courts. Disturbing the peace was the charge arains trannerbill, and the offense was committed on the 4th day of last January. The case was set for trial on January 25, but the defendant called for a jury and took a continuance until February 9. Then he had it laid over another day. On February 10 he was tried by jury, convicted and his punishment assessed at a fine of $25 and oosts of court. An appeal was taken to the Court of Criminal Correction where, on March 3, the case came up and judament was affirmed against thin by default, he not answering to his name. Tannehlil was in court, however, and his attorney had the sentence set saide, and the oase docksted for trials April 7. On that day it went over by consent until May 5, and another continuance was had by consent until June 2. Then the defendant took a continuance for the city until August 4. Our that date it went over by consent until Lored, All told there have been just thirteen settings of the case.

Tannehlil is the young married man who was arrested on Braedway and Washington avenue on complaint of Bobert Jones, a citizen, who claimed to have seen Tannehlil running his hand under the skirts of ladies as they got on bobtail cars at that corner. Max Smitzer and Joe Decola, two newsboys about the corner, testified at the trial in the Police Court that they saw Tannehlil do as alleged, and that he came there frequently of an overling as ladies were returning home, and every time one of them boarded a bob-tail car he would go out, pretend to want the same car, jostle against her and return to the sidewalk and wait for the next car. Mrs. John Gardhausen, whose husband had complained to the police previously of his wife being in suited in this manner at the corner mentioned by some young man, identified Tannehill denied his test mony and there was no other witness

THE LATE C. R. GARRISON.

Scene Recorded in "American Notes" An Exquisite Bit of Tenderness Showing the Author's Love for Children—The Little Baby Who Died So Fearfully This Week the Central Figure—An Incident of the First American Trip.

The death of C. B. Garrison, who was the son of D. R. Garrison, and who left this world so horribly by falling down the mining shaft at Webb City, Monday afternoon, has attracted a great deal of attention, and has called to the mind of those who knew him closely, the fact that his advent upon this planet also attracted a great deal of attention. In the latter case, not directly as in his death, but, nevertheless, more extensively, because his little life was wover into the susceptible nature of the great Dickens and through him became known to nearly all of the American people. His life ended in a tragedy; it began, to Dickens' mind, with a drama.
It was in January, 1842, that Charles Dickens on his first tour left the East for a trip through the West. He came out to St. Louis in that journey, and by June 7 was back in the East. It was on his travels from Louisville to St. Louis by steamboat that he met with a baby, who figured in a scene so sweetly described by the novelist that thousands o made such an impression on the great writer. The baby described in what follows was C. R. Garrison, who was then on his way to the excerpt tells the rest. Few of those who at yes terday's services looked thr ugh the coffin lid upon the mangled features lying still in eternal sleep, guessed that that face over forty years ago, had by its sleeping peace, touched one of the greatest hearts that ever throbbed.

"Dick" Garrison often read and reread with increasing interest the story of the love with which his early years were blest. To his most intimate iriends he often read the part of the "American Notes" in which his babyhood is thus described. THE LITTLE WOMAN'S LOVE.

is thus described:

THE LITTLE WOMAN'S LOVE.

On the fourth night after leaving Louisville we reached St. Louis, and here! I witnessed the conclusion of an incident, trifling enough in itself but very pleasant to see, which had interested me during the whole journey.

There was a little woman on board with a little baby; both little woman and little child were cheerful, go. 4-looking, bright-eyed and fair to see. The little woman h.d been passing a long time with her sick mother in New York.

The baby was born in her mother's house, and she had not seen her husband (to whom she was now returning) for twelve months, having left him a month or two after their marriage.

Well, to be sure, there never was a little woman so tail of hope and tenderness and love and anxiety as the time of the sure of the sure of the sure whether 'He' would know it, whether 'He' and got her le ter; and whether, if she sens the baby ashore by somebody else. "He' would know it, meeting it in the street; which, seeing that he had never set eyes upon it in his life, was not very likely in the abstract, but was probable enough to the young mother.

She was such an artle's little creature, and was meeting it in the street; which, seeing that he had never set eyes upon it in his life, was not very likely in the abstract, but was probable enough to the young mother.

She was such an arties little creature, and was sine the sampy, beaming, hopeful state, and let out all the sampy, beaming, hopeful state, and let out all the sampy, beaming, hopeful state, and let out all the sampy, beaming, hopeful state, and let out all the sampy, beaming, hopeful state, and let out all the sampy, beaming, hopeful state, and let out all the sampy, beaming, hopeful state, and let out all the sampy, beaming, hopeful state, and let out all the sampy, beaming, hopeful state, and let out all the sampy hopeful state, and let out the spirit of it as much as she can the expected anybody to meet her at st. Louis, whether she would want to a goashore the night we reached it (but lie supposed she wouldn't), and cutting many other day looks of that nature.

There was one little weazen, dried-apple faced old woman who took occasion to doubt the constancy of the shall see in such circumstances to beer evenement; and the sampy how and then, or laughing like the rest when the little woman called it by its father's name, and asked it ali manner of fantastic questions concerning him and the joy of her heart.

It was something of a blow to the little woman, that when we were within twenty miles of our destination, il became clearly necessary to put this baby to bed. But she got over it with the same good humor; tied a hands-erchief around her head, and came into her was sown by the single ones; and such peaks of laughter as the -little woman herself (who would, just as soon have cried greeted every jest with!

At last there were the lights of st. Louis, and here was the wharf, and those were the steps, and the little woman covering her isce with her hands and laughing (or seeming to laught) more than ever, ran into her own cabin and shut herself up. I have no doubt that in the charming inconsistency of such excending-place; and everyholy look Heaven knows how she ever got there—there was the little woman clinging with both arms tights round the neck of a fine, £00d-100k ng, sturdy young fellow! and in a moment afterwards, there she was again, actually clapping her little hands for joy, as she dragged him through the small door of her small cabin, to look at the baby as he lay asleep!

IN THE COMMITTEE.

THE BILL TO PROVIDE FOR A GENERAL SPRINKLING OF THE CITY.

Arguments Before the Mayor on the Approval of the Bill Vacating a Section of North Main Street—Important Witnesses Summoned To-Day by the Gas Investiga City Hall-Municipal Matters.

Chairman Stone of the Ways and Mean Committee of the House of Delegates has called a meeting for 3 p. m. to-morrow to consider the bill providing for the submission to the people of an amendment to the charter providing for the ling. There seems to be very little difference of opinion as to the necessity of making a change in the law. In response to an inquiry concerning the bill Chairman Stone to-day slad: "The committee has not yet considered the bill at all, but no time will be lost in passing on it. At present I don't see any reason why the bill cannot be disposed of at to-morrow's session of the disposed of at to-morrow's session of the committee, and reported to the House to-morrow night, though the discussion may take a shape that will necessitate holding back the reportfor some time. I don't think it a wise plan to take on other amendments to the bill. It should. I think, be put before the people as a clear-cut issue and he the only amendment submitted to the people at the proposed election. Something must certainly be done to make provision for street sprinkling. The people will never consent to go back to the old etyle of private subscriptions to pay for sprinkling. Any one who knows anything about municipal finances knows that we cannot raise enough money out of the municipal revenue to defray such an expense. Why, you remember what a struggle we had last June to raise $30,000. We had to cramp every department to do it and then had to take $40,000 from the Street Department, crippling it pretty badily. After encountering those difficulties in $80,000. We had to cramp every department to do it sand then had to take $40,000 from the Street Department, crippling it pretty badly. After encountering those difficulties in ruising enough money to carry it on for three months I think we had better not try to raise money out of the revenue to carry on the sprinkling for the whole season."

Delegate Hays, another member of the Ways and Means Committee, said: "I favored the present bill and am in favor of the amendment. At the time the present bill for scheral sprinkling was before the House I had an idea that its provisions were not the wisest that could be made, but the festivities were coming on and there was no time leit to undertake such a plan as the one now in contemplation. I do not think the bill will meet with any opposition in the House. I understood that there was some disposition to raise some technical legal objections, but I have since been informed that City Counselor Bell approves of the form of the bill, and that there is no ground for objection to the legality of the proposed step. I think the bill will go through in good time. As I understand it, it is necessary to give sixty days' notice of the proposed election, so that in order to have the election in February it will be necessary to put the bill through without much delay."

in North Main street property appeared before Mayor Francis to argue for and against the approval of the bill vacating before Mayor Francis to argue for and against the approval of the bill vacating that street between Mallinckrodt and Salisbury streets. The bill was introduced in the Municipal Assembly by President Mallinckrodt of the Chemical-works, located on the street which runs between the buildings owned by the company. It was passed in the Assembly, and is now before the Mayor for signature or veto. The officers of the works stated that the vacation of the street was asked because there was no other room for extending the manufactory and that privacy was absointely necessary. For this reason they could not well continue the business if the roadway running through the works was generally used. They elted the fact that the street was not onsed at present and that the traveling public would suffer no serious inconvenience by the approbation of the bill. Messrs. Geo. A. Castleman, Oscar Ried, Mr. Schneile of the Schneile—Querl Lumber Company and W. G. Clark also appeared before His Honor. Mr. Clark referred to the fact that the Chemical Company, which contemplated using a small part of the street. Mr. Schneile also objected to the approval of the bill. Mr. Castleman disputed the legal right to vacate the street. After hearing the arguments Mayor Francis said he would take the matter under consideration. He has ten days within which to act on the bill.

Sergeant-at-Arms Brady of the House o Delegates to-day summoned President William H. Thomson of the Gas Trust, President Kaiser of the Laclede Gaslight Company, Dwight Tredway of the Water-Gas Company, and J. J. We sell clothing as we would change five-dollar notes-giving full equivalent for what is received. The maker selling to the user can afford that.

A fair money's-worth is at the bottom of every man's intention in buying clothing. Good quality is fairness. Good style and work are its kinsmen.

The only way we have to make sure of all three is to make sure of the quality. It only takes an ingenious weaver to turn cotton and wool into a cloth that looks like all-wool. It takes experience and analysis to get at the truth and make sure of all-wool.

We use both. We make the clothing. We give a diligent, vigilant zeal to making it well. We sell it. We save profits. We sell at low prices because we save profits that cheap clothing mostly pays to the manufacturer, to his agent, to storekeepers buying from agents. We cut loose from them all and sell directly to you. We're coming to the main point. We are selling plenty of it now. It costs no more than the common sort of clothing. We ought to sell graphic presses. Its stock of paper and of finished and partly-finished work was very large, estimated to be $100,000. Most of the winter work for theatrical companies was finished, but a large portion was still in the building, and a number of theatrical companies will be without material to properly bill their plays. Among those suffering in this way are Charles A. Hoyt's three companies, "The Tin Soldier," "Rag Baby" and "Hole in the Ground," "Michael Strogoff." Kirally's "Aladdin," Montgomery Phister's "Soap Bubble," and Forepaugh's and Barnum's circuses. The work for the latter, however, had not advanced very far.

A STARTLING SCENE.

The scene during the fire was startling. The height of the building, the combustibility of its contents and the substantial style of its structure served to make the fire fierce, but comparatively slow. It burned floor after floor, and the falling of the heavy lithographic stones gave sounds like the discharge of a battery. Later the falling of the walls sent sheets of fiance and showers of sparks high into the air. During this part of the catastrophe a fireman, John Shuler, who was on a ladder, thirty-five feet from the ground, missed his footing and fell to the ground. He was taken to the hospital with injuries which may prove fatal. The business is probably the largest of its kind in the world. One hundred and twenty-five men were employed. Mr. Hines Strobridge, President of the company, says he thought the building fireproof, and is astonished that it should go as it did. Within the building as tenants were James Barclay, job printer, and the Halstead Stocking Company. Their loss will be about $10,000 each. The best estimate that can be made of the total loss is about $500,000, on which the insurance is $150,000. But the loss on business during the time of enforced idleness cannot be accurately estimated. The building may be regarded as a total loss. The portions of the walls left standing are worthless. The fire is still burning slowly at 10 a.m., and engines are throwin oting and fell to the ground. He was taken the hospital with injuries which may prove ital. By Telegraph to the Post-Disparch. o'clock this morning the Rock Island Freight dike. Depot was discovered by some yard men to be on fire. It was some minutes before an alarm was rung in and by the time the Fire Department arrived the flames had gained such headway that all efforts to extinguish them proved unavailing. The depot and contents are a complete loss. Among the freight was a carload of stones, a carload of building paper, a dynamo and electric light paraphernalia for the Burton Car-works. It is claimed the consignees had been apprised of the arrival of the freight and therefore the loss falls on them. The records of the depot were in the safe, which went through the fire intact. The depot was only built last summer at a cost of 4,000. The insurance is not known, the policy being at the company's headquarters. The total loss will amount to $7,000. Depot was discovered by some yard men to

The Calumet & Hecla Mine Fire. BOSTON, December 1 .- At the office of the Calumet & Hecla Mining Company in this city to-day, the various officials of the company who were present denied any knowledge whatever of the condition of the fire in the company's mine. Treasurer Sewsbury was shown a private dispatch which stated that things looked very unfavorable for the plant. He said to the reporter: "You know as much about it as we do. The mine is closed up and no one can know the extent of the fire or damage."

retrenchment introduced by the writer in the House of Delegates, and I concluded you had been using a pair of glass optics, looking for chestnuts to supplant the snake stories of Sunday journalism, and had included the House of Delegates in your range of observation; hence the editorials of last night's issue. Please abandon the glass-eye criticism of myself and resolution and see things as they are. I am now and have been a strong supporter of municipal sprinkling, your statement to the contrary notwithstanding.

The resolution mentioned as "too thin" is one that may accomplish a great saving and a great deal of good. If it fails to accomplish its purpose it certainly can do no harm. And to conclude, Mr. Editor, I will say that, not having that Machavelian insight with or without the use of glass eyes, I am utterly unable to see wherein the resolution conflicts with municipal sprinkling, but on the contrary, could show where it might do same some great good. Trusting you will publish this, as I believe you do not knowingly wish to misrepresent me, I remain, yours respectfully, St. Louis, December 1.

The alarm from Box 412, Broadway and Bowen, at 6:35 o'clock this morning called the Fire Department to the scene of a disastrous conflagration on Broadway and Eliwood street, in what is known as Blumenthal's tenement row. The origin of the fire is at present a mystery, but when the department arrived at the scene, one section of the south end of the building, 5028 south Broadway, was entirely enveloped in flames. Assistant-Chief Ben Fatt, and Engine Companys, No. 2 and 3, assisted by chemical engine, No. 2, pitched in with a will to save the buildings, which are about the oldest in this locality. The occupants of 5928, where the fire originated, John Honson and (amily were still in bed, totally unconscious of their surroundings, but were safely taken out by the fire laddles. In a half hour No. 5928 and 5926 South Broadway were entirely gutted. In an hour the fire was entirely out. The loss on the buildings, Nos. 5928 and 5926, which were two-story brick, and on the furniture, will amount to $2,000, partly insured. The row embraces Broadway from Ellwood street to the builfs, and was very old. A defective fine may probably have been the cause of the fire.

At an early hour this morning the Court room was crowded with a large throng of men anxiously waiting for the Judge's decision. At a quarter past nine Judge McClellan arrived, and as soon as order could be had, he announced his decision, which granted the administratorship to Dr. H. P. Howard of San Antonio, Tex. The bond was fixed at $500,000, which Howard can easily give, as he is one of the most influential citizens of San Antonio, at which place he is Postmaster. Judge McClellan stated that he had duly weighed all the evidence produced in the case, and that H. P. Howard was, according to the testimony, a relative of the late Col. T. C. Bean. The decision is an important one and considered correct by the majority of people here. Dr. Howard is now in the city and has many friends here who congratuiate him on his success. The old citizens here have always been indignant at the claims of the man Saunders, and roundly denounce him as a fraud. No one who knew Col. Bean for years, believed that he was a murderer. The reputed will of Col, Bean, which was sent here some time since, was laughed at and made light of till no notice is taken of it.

Mr. Morgan, when seen by a reporter on the subject, said at first that he was not inclined to ject, said at first that he was not inclined to reply to the reports, as they have accomplished no damage, and he had no desire to seem to invite a newspaper controversy. Finally, he stated that the report had no foundation, and that all the reports which suggested that there was any disagreement or conflict between the syndicate and the Baitimore & Ohio management or any of its interests were false. Mr. Morgan said that entire harmony prevalled, and he added that the company was in sound condition and was doing better than it had ever done before. He said he never could tell exactly what the total nominal loss was, for the reason that his Chicago brokers had never rendered an account showing what had been realized and count showing what had been realized on closing out their deal. In every way he made it clear that Harper was his principal; that his checks on the Fidelity Bank were not against any balance there to his credit, but that he was given to understand that they were to be protected by Harper.

When it came to the cross-examination, wilshire proved to be loaded for more than one kind of game. His statements to-day will cause some squirming in other quarters. Nearly the first question asked by Maj. THE RAILROADS.

The Reduced Rate Trouble-Discrimination -The Wabash-An Appointment.

Among railroad men here there is little expectation that the threatened war between the C., B. & Q. and the C. & A. over the reduc tion of rates will ever come to an actual issue. The situation is simply reduced to this, that the C., B. & Q. to save duced to this, that the C., B. & Q. to save its local Iowa and Illinois business announces that it will put rates on their business down to the interstate basis, and the C. & A. says if it does this it will give the same rates on business from Missouri River points, thus extending the cut to Missouri and Kansas. The C. B. & Q. has postponed the date of the reduction from December 4 to December 20, and it is believed that before this time there will be a meeting and the whole matter will be settled. One thing, however, seems pretty definitely settled, and this is that the rates, while they will not come down to an interstate basis, will be reduced considerably. considerably.

down to an interstate basis, will be reduced considerably.

DISCRIMINATION.

An article in the Salina (Kan.) Herald calls attention to about as gross a piece of discrimination as can be made on the part of the Missouri Pacific. It shows that the rates from St. Louis to Salina, Kan., are nearly double the rates from St. Louis to Louisville, Neb., although the two are exactly the same distance. On the hundred-weight in different classifications the overcharge to Salina omounts to from 12 to 65 cents, and on the carload from $16.50 to $20. This is a matter in which not only the Salina merchants, but the St. Louis merchants are interested, as there is Chicago competition at Salina. Testimony From an Expert.

It is said that an old Confederate soldier livgard and inclosed $1 for a ticket in the Louisiana State lottery, and the writer took occasion to say to Gen. Beauregard that he had foito say to Gen. Beauregard that he had followed the General four years in the army and that he was poor and wanted the General to select for him a ticket that would draw a prize in the lottery. According to the advertisement Gen. Beauregard and Gen-Early superintended the drawing of the Louisiana lottery every month, and the solder thought that Gen. Beauregard could select the right ticket for a prize. Gen. Beauregard, it is said, answered the 'li soldier's letter and enclosed the ticket as requested for the dollar, but gave the following advice: "My Dear Old Comrade: If you will stick to the Louisiana lottery you will be as poor as you were at the close of the four years of cruel war, and you will not have enough left to load a pop-gun."

CHINESE MASONS.

A Curious Lodge of Them in New York -Their Meeting-Place. From the New York WORLD.

Old Masons were until late of the opinion that no such a thing as a Chinese Mason existed. One gentleman said he had seen Arabs and Turks who were good Masons, but to the best of his knowledge no Chinaman was in the Order. Nevertheless, there are not only Chinese Masons, but right here in New York there nese Masons, but right here in New York there is a Chinese Masonie lodge in full blast with a membership of over three hundred. It is a native organization, not allied directly to the Free and Accepted Masons, but said to be founded on principles very nearly akin.

The lodge-room is at No 18 Mott street, second foor front, and has recently been remodied and refitted in very good shape, all newly painted and cleaned. The lodge turniture is of Chinese design, and imported from China expressly for the society at a great expense. A tail flagstaff with a rope for running up colors is on top of the building. Above the door as one enters the lodge-room is a red sign in native characters signifying "Chinese Masonic Society," and down the sides are two long slips of red paper bearing the mottees. One of these is "Do good to one another," and the other relates to the business of the order.

long slips of red paper bearing the mottees. One of these is "Do good to one another," and the other relates to the business of the order.

The interior is like most Chinese quarters, only lighter, and not full of odd turns and unsuspected corners. Immediately on entering one is led into a sort of ante-room, and thence into the main or lodge-room. At the lower end of the room is the altar, and a very valuable one it is, costing in China $1.500. Above it is an alcove in which a colored drawing is suspended. It is not the least curlous thing in the place, the design being three figures, one seated and two others bending over his shoulder. The seated figure represents the venerable father of Chinese Masonry. The face is heavy, placid and adorned with a long black beard. The other two are respectively the spirits of light and darkness, who are supposed to be giving him counsel. In front of the altar a lamp is hung. It is never extinguished, and burns in commemoration of the dead of the order. Another emblem is two sticks of sandal-wood punk thrust into a box of sand. They keep smouldering away and fill the air with a faint but sweet perfume.

On the wall is a long board and on this are pasted a great number of sheets of paper covered with Chinese hieroglyphics. These are the lists of members voted on in the New York lodge. Near the roster hang two books. One of these is sent out from the Supreme Lodge at San Francisco, and gives a detailed account of a number of cases of those in distress and sickness and the whereabouts of each one who needs help. The other is a subscription book in which the various amounts subscribed are entered. At intervals the dead one who needs help. The other is a subscription book in which the various amounts subscribed are entered. At intervals decided upon by the digalitaries of the order, as the necessities of business may demand. Paris Letter to London World. The son-in-law of the President of the Republic is accused of forgery. The corruption begins at the Elysee and ends nobody knows where. Meanwhile Gen. Caffarel, who a week ago was pronounced to be a cynical scoundrel, is now gradually conquering sympathy as a victim, and, until the Prefecture, the Magis trature and M. Wilson shall have settled their little differences, both Gen. Caffarel, Mme Limouzin and M. Lorentz have been set at liberty. Now, as an instance of the pyramidal incoherence of the situation and of the prodigious demorslization of the public, see what happens. The serious aspect of the whole affair sinks into the background, the what happens. The serious aspect of the whole affair sinks into the background, the reporter takes the place of the moralist, the censor and the satirist, and the ingenious proprietor of the bohemian cafe, Le Chat Noir, obtains a tremendous advertisement for his pot-house free gratis and for nothing. Mme. Limouzin and her lover, Lorentz, whose deserted wife died of starvation a day or two ago, dined last night at Le Chat Noir as the guests of the head reporters of three Parisian newspapers, which, of course, print columns about the President and about the charms of Mme. Limouzin's witty and cynical conversation. In the course of her after-dinner gossip, much of which was too free even for the fill Blast to print, Mme. Limouzin revealed the fact that not only Gen. Thibaudin had been the slave of her green eyes, but that also Gen. Paul. Grevy, the Senator, had burned for her with an illieit flame-and placed his influence at her disposal. Considering the wide-spread corruption which this scandal has shown up, it is safe to prophesy that Mme. Limouzin will continue to enjoy her liberty, and one of these days we shall hear of her as manager of a cafe or author of her own memoirs, "La Pourriture Republicains," by Mme. Limouzin, published in weekly penny parts. An enterprising publisher might ask the Orjeans Princes to subsidize such an undertakng.

TWICE STRUNG UP. A Gypsy Escaping Death Only to Be Hanged

From the Pall Mall Gazette. Two Hungarian peasants were one night driving home to Makad from market at Kees-kemet. The road leads over a wide puszta district through Szent Miklos, and just outside the latter place past the fatal hill on which some years ago a gallows used to stand. It some years ago a gallows used to stand. It was twilight—between dog and wolf—as the saying is in South Germany. The keen-eyed peasants saw soon enough that the hangman had been at work and dispatched a dark man of honor into the next world.

Filled with curiosity, they left their vehicle and walked toward the gallows. The culprit was a gypsy, against whose being hanged the peasants would hardly have objected; but to their astonishment they found that he not only was quite warm, but that his heart was still slowly beating. After holding a little conference, the peasants cut the man down, put him in their cart and drove off. Before long the gypsy began to return to consciousness, the color came back into his face, and nothing remained of his late experience but a certain feeling of discomfort.

At the next public house the peasants stopped to take a drink after their success in doing justice out of one of her sacrifices. The innkeeper, who was well known to be always on the side of the thieves, shook with loud laughter as the men told of their adventure. But the thick end of the wedge appeared when the two Samaritans, after a deep draught, came back to their cart, for the ungrateful brigand had driven away in spite of the "certain feeling of discomfort."

He had, however, not quite counted the cost. The innkeeper borrowed the peasants' two fresh horses, and soon the gypsy was overtaken, to be driven back and once more hanged on the same gallows. To tell the truth, adds the writer, the dilettanti were cleverer in this case than the professional hangmen, for the brigand was this time quite dead. After a short time the story became public; the peasants were imprisoned, and their case kept the cleverest lawyers of the day for a long time hard at work.

Democrat will excite general surprise and curiosity, and various conjectural explanations will be suggested. It may be supposed, for instance, that he inclines to the Sparks view of our land policy and does not like to incur the treatment which SPARKS received for persistently upholding that view and onestly doing his duty in spite of furious opposition from the land-grabbers. A sufficient explanation, however, is found in the fact that Judge PHILIPS now enjoys one good office and is slated for the succession to the United States District Judgeship or any more desirable position which our Senators can obtain for him.

THE TRUST QUESTION.

Pending a municipal investigation of the charge that the St. Louis Gas. Fuel & Power Company has violated the conditions of its franchise by consolidating or pooling its earnings with other corporations or persons, we are told that no such charge can be proved against the company, and that it cannot be held responsible for what the owners of a majority of its stock may have done with their stock. If they have placed their stock under the control of a trustee who has similarly-conditioned control of the majority of a competing gas corporation's stock, that is something which the company cannot prevent. It is responsible for its own acts as a corporation, and so long as these are not in violation of its

This looks plausible enough, but if it can be shown that this "trust" arrangement practically amounts to a pooling of the control and profits of two competing concerns when either corporation is bound by contract to keep clear of any amalgamation of business interests or pooling with "any other corporation or person," will the "trustee" device enable the corporation to virtually violate its contract with impunity? That is a question of law yet to be decided, and the decision of it talk heard in some quarters, claiming to be will decide the question whether any corporation can be held to an observance of any condition of its franchise which an material is repudiated on all sides. WASHINGTON, D. C., December 1 .- Senato

William E. Chandler, ex-Secretary of the Navy, was seen last evening by the Post-Disate Senator Pike of New Hampshire, Mr. easy reach of the White House. It has been here in advance of the majority of the mem-bers so as to look after some naval affairs. It is said Mr. Whitney's overturning of some of Mr. Chandler's ideas has not pleased him. Senator Chandler is supposed to be on the war-path, and expects to be a member of the Com-Don Cameron was Chairman last year, and, although ex-Secretary Chandler is known to be the best posted on matters pertaining to the navy, still he is a new Senator and may not get the first place on the committee. Sen-ator Chandler will have a good opportunity, however, to look after Secretary Whitney wants investigated.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent was re-selved in the front parlor. Senator Chandler said: "There is a great deal of work for the done very slowly. This is the last session before the Presidential campaign, and the members of both parties will perform their duties with an eye to the effect on the Presidential situation in 1888. I don't like to be interviewed on general subjects, because it looks as if, now that I have been elected Senator for two years, I want to rush into print with my opinions and ideas. When I was in the Navy Department. I was always willing to state the facts in regard to anything connected with the department, but I never like to give general talks. You spoke of Mr. Blaine's giving you an interview just before he sailed, and that reminds me of a very funny story I saw recently, about an attempt to interview him when he was coming into Paris on a train. Mr. Blaine positively refused to talk, and the correspondent then gave a description of his movements in the minutest detail. It was very funny." very slowly. To be sure, it happened while the Republicans were in power, but the Atlanta was judged by an advisory board, which was made up of the best men and brains to be had. Now, if the Democrats are going to lay all the blame on us, we can show that more blunders have been made in the Navy Department since the Democrats have been in charge than the Republicans made in twenty-four years of service, including four years of war.

Gen. Sheridan Talks About the Retirement

By Telegraph to the POST-DISPATCH. WASHINGTON, D. C., December 1 .- The POST-DISPATCH correspondent found Gen. Phil Sheridan in his library at his home on Rhode Island avenue yesterday. To the correspondent Gen. Sheridan said: "I regard as the most important recommendation in my report the reference to the retirement of many officers who have been worn out in the seavice. Subscriber.—Gen. Rosecrans' address is Washington, D. C.

FATRON.—I. The Prince of Wales visited this country in 1860. 2. Ericsson is still alive.

THESE MEN ARE DEAD WOOD and should be relieved on the same principle that a tree should be pruned of dead leaves. I have made the suggestion and I'll be glad to see Congress act on it, but they are the representatives of the people and if they don't take it up I don't care."

"Which of the other recommendations in your report do you consider of the next importance?"

your report do you consider of the next importance?"

"Well, I have asked for 5,000 more men for the army. The standing army is supposed to be 25,000—that is to say, this is the limit. As a matter of fact there never is and cannot be quite this full quota in service. We cannot recruit a new man until the time of service of his predecessor has expired. This takes a few days and the result is that there is always a margin of two or three thousand men, which makes the sctual standing army not more than about twenty-two thousand men. I have recommended the addition of 5,000 men more."

"Where would you put the additional force?"

"I should make two regiments of 800 men each of artillery. There is a long stretch of coast from here East and two artillery regiments would be well employed about the for-tifications. The rest of the men I should distribute about the posts."

"How is the army equipped for fighting the Indians?"

"Have you looked into the tariff question or ethor matters of legislation that are likely to come up before the next session of Congress?" "I am no politician. I don't know anything about what will occupy the next Congress, and have paid little attention to the political field. My army duties keep me fully engaged."

POST DISPATCH correspondent called last eventing on Senator John Sherman at his resiin filing a large bundle of old letters. Mr. Sherman said: "I have lately been called on by a great number of representatives of the press, and to all of them I said that I had nothing to tell them. I can not speak now on any of the public issues of the coming ses-

"Have you any objections to giving your yiews in regard to the tariff?"

"I am pretty well known to be a strong protectionist. That is all I will say."

"And in regard to the outlook of 1888?"

"That is too far ahead to talk about. I don't nunds spoke without reserve on the tariff question, he said he did not wish his views published at this time. In relation to the tariff, however, he said for publication: "Whether or not a tariff bill will be passed at this session of Congress, I cannot say. The subject has long been axitated, and if it comes up before the presontsession it will, no doubt, occupy a great deal of time. There are so many things to be taken into consideration in all the ramifications that it cannot be liastly disposed of. Several things are well to be thought of before forming an opinion. It cannot be exactly foretold what the results will be from a reduction of the taxes. You re not be exactly foretold what the results will be from a reduction of the taxes, You remember that the tax on fea and coffee was taken off some time ago, and what was the result? The income from these products was withdrawn from the Treasury. But the price of tea and coffee remained as high as ever. The importers made the extra profit and we lost the taxes. Now, how will it work on other goods? As I said, there are a great many things to be carefully considered on this tariff question. At this time I don't care to go into any discussion of it."

"New York is an uncertain State. The recent elections has not changed it."
In relation to the probable Republican nominee for the head of the Presidential ticket for 1883, and in relation to his own chances, he preferred not to be interviewed.

At the office of the National Transit Company, which forms a part of the Standard Oil Company system, it was stated that although the character of the company's business, that of pipe-laying, would almost insure a knowledge of the new scheme, were it in the suggested stage of advancement, nothing had been heard of it, either as a suggestion or a certainty, and as a result no faith was placed in the report in question.

Washington, D. C., December 1.—The nov els of Tolatol are now the popular craze in Washington society, and the people who canwashington society, and the people who can-not talk of Tolstoi's characteristics and his re-ligious theories are far behind the times. Mrs. Senator Cockrell spent the summer in a little Quaker settlement in Virginia, and before she left Washington she bought a box of Russian books translated into English and French. She says she finds the French translations give a bet ter side of Tolstoi's genius than the English, and that in them his delicate shades of thought are more clearly out. She thinks one should read his works several times in order to fully appreciate him and says he is an author who grows upon you. Mrs. Vilas is another lover of Tolstoi, and Mrs. Whitney keeps up and English. Mrs. Fairchild is a well-read matters with more interest than of fashion.

Washington society has a far higher ton than people not acquainted with it suppose and its ladies have other duties than those performed before the looking-glass. They have to keep up with the times, both in politics and literature, and it would be unpardon not to know what was going on in Congress and acters in the country meet here every winter and it requires wide information of public men and public matters to prevent one's making a which he does not. The knowledge of French is more common than it has ever been before and French phrases are uttered in many conversations. The diplomats prefer to talk French rather than English, and some of them are unable to carry on a good conversation in the English language.

GOOD FRENCH SCHOLARS. Many of the leading statesmen are good French scholars. Edmunds reads French easily Hitt of Illinois can talk the language like a Paris an. Allen G. Thurman's amusements lie in the reading of French novels, and John Sherman's library is full of forel in books on finance, and he reads the French, though he does not apeak it. Thurman learned French at the same time he learned to snuff. It was when he was a boy. A French professor who had a very pretty daughter asked Thurman's mother to take charge of the girl, and she did so on condition that the professor would give young allen French lessons. Prattling with the maiden and taking lessons of the professor, he got a good foundation in the language, which is not surpassed by that of any of our public men. The old professor snuffed, and the boy begged pinches of the titiliating powder between the sentences, and thus acquired the habit, which has stuck to him through life, and which, added to his hig nose and the gorgeons handkerchief which he uses to wipe it has given him the title of "Knight of the Red Bandanna."

DOLLY MADISON.

Mr. F. E. Andrews, the artist who painted the picture of Martha Washington which hangs in the East room, has begun work on a picture of Dolly Madison, which will possibly be bourt by the tovernment when finished. I saw his first sketch of the picture to-day. He proposes to make a full-length portrait and to present Mrs. President hadison as she always appeared in life—with a highly-colored a least third woman and the face will be the handsomest of the White House gallery. Mr. Andrews has talked with the descendants of Madison and knows the colors that Mrs. Madison wore. He will, if possible, get a dress that was actually in use at the time, will secure a model of the size of Mrs. Madison and paint her, as it were, from life. The dress which Martha Washington wears in her picture in the East room is taken irom a centennial costume imported by one of the wealthlet ladies in New York in 1876. It was made by Worth and Andrews borrowed it for the purpose. The clothes in his portrait of Jefferson, were made after the direction of Jefferson, were made after the direction of Jefferson serion developed in the purpose. The clothes in his portrait of Jefferson was taken from the upper half of Stuart's portrait and the lower half from a medallion which gave a better representation of the mouth and chin.

Washington is a young man, not over 30, small, stout and light haired. It is a curious thing that a descendant of George Washington should represent the district of Andrew Jackson.

worthy of the recognition it received and of the enthusiasm it aroused. The cast was made up of artists who gave to the interpretation of the works intelligence, fine vocal powers and skill. Eloi Sylva is an ideal Wagnerian tenor. He has the breadth and depth of chest, the German physique and the robust quality of voice necessary to sustain the trying scores in which the orchestra would drown a lighter voice. His work as Tannhauser was nothing short of a triumph, his spiendid voice filling the hall with its resonant tones, and yet investing the notes with genuine feeling.

Mine. Fursch-Madi sgain demonstrated her superior qualities as a dramatic soprano and as a genuine artiste. She gave a treatment to the role of Elizabeth which was at once strong and full of feeling, and she filled it admirably in voice and dramatic action.

William Ludwig's Wolfram was another artistic and powerful effort. Ladwig satisfied every desire with his fine voice and pleasing and dramatic intensity. The remainder of the cast was satisfactory in every respect, every member of it doing conscientious and capable work. Frank Vetta appearing as Herman, Sophia Traubman as Venus, Amanda Fabris as Heinrich, and George H. Broderick as Reinmar.

There was no production of the American Opera Company which reached the standard of magnificence of "Lohengrin," and it has been the most popular opera in the repertoire. For its presentation to night a strong cast has been selected, while the production will be in all respects the same as that given in the past as far as seenic and costumic richness go. The cast includes Barton McGuckin as Lohengrin, Emma Juch as Eisa, William Ludwiz as Frederick, Frank Vetta as Henry I., Clara Poole as Ortrad and William Meston as the Herald.

Sevening marked the first evidence of ang like success in the engagement of Sational Opera Company, and is was a greatly idealistic. There are plenty of men absorbed with carriages, and Music Hall, for Aironged Aironged with carriages, and Music Hall, for Aironged With Carriages over town. Services are held three times a day in some churches and every evening, so that the alternative of going to church or the opera is sharply put. The Episcopal clergy, too, having their hearts fixed on the success of the Mission work, make it distinctly a matter of duy to choose the church services. Dr.
Holland of St. George's Church went so far as to make a few pointed remarks to his congregation last Sunday, in which he urged the members at this season not to attend the opera and to go to church. He said this was not because he condemned the opera, but simply because of the mission. Other clergymen have been as urgent, and Episcopalians who go to the opera must not only pay for seats but must have a wrestle with their consciences. This doubtless accounts for some of the vacant seats in Music Hall.

There was some talk of a serenade to the artists of the National Opera Company during the first of the week, by a party of gentlemen who are members of one of the most exclusive clubs in town. The serenade was not given and the cause of the failure is amusing. The plan came up in a conversation of an agent of the company and a nusical gentleman who promised to organize the party and give the serenade. The singer laid great stress on the fact that the serenade would be given by the party as gentlemen, repeating this remark a score of times. The arrangements were made, but at the final meeting of the agent and the serenade organizer before the event, the latter said that it would cost just $30 to give it, and waited expectantly for the cash. The agent looked a little surprised and remarked that he thought the serenade was to be given by the party as gentlemen. As he had no authority to incur such an expense the negatiations were broken off. The sum demanded would have paid each gentleman serenader $3.50. The first thing that strikes a singer in Music Hall is the wonderful acoustic quality of the immense auditorium and the ease with which one can sing in it. Patti and her associates in the Abbey company remarked this, as have all the artists who have been here with the National Opera Company. Sylva is charmed with the hall, and Barton McGuckin remarked after the second act of "Queen of Sheba," Tuesday night, that he had never sung in a hall of anything like its dimensions with so much ease. "It is a delightful place to sing," said he, "and does not require a particle of extra effort. Of course I cannot tell whether my soit notes are heard at the extreme end or not." As a matter of fact, every note he uttered—and some of them were shaded to the finest thread of sound—was heard distinctly by a friend who stood against the wall back of the seats to test it.

The fling that Lily Langtry made at Maggle Mitchell when she referred to her as a variety actress in her row with Roberts. Hilliard does not bother the little star much, and has called out a host of detenders who have handled the Lang ry without gloves. Maugie Mitchell bas been on the stage too long and has made too great a success, while at the same time doing what Mrs. Langtry has not done, preserving her personal character absolutely untainted by the slighest suspicion for any mud thrown by the English beauty to cling to her skirts. She simply says she cares very little about what Mrs. Langtry says, and that as far the variety stage woes she has known many talented actresses who have risen to high places from this branch of the profession and who have also maintained high characters as women, wives and mothers. Womanlike, she adds, too, that perhaps Mrs. Langtry's cold reception by the best circles of Long Branch has something to de with her slurring remark. Altogether, Maggle Mitchell seems to have the best of the spat. Maggie Mitchell's matinee audience at the Grand y sterday afternoon drew one of the largest audiences that the theater ever held. To-night the play will be "Pearl of Savoy" and to morrow night "Maggie, the Midget," instead of her new play, "The Little Binner," as previously announced. It was found impossible to secure the scenery requisite for the production of the new play in time for the performance.

ceiver and a decree of dissolution of partnership was presented to day to Judge Lucas.

A. A. Paxson, representing John B. Dorris, a showman, against E. D. Colvin. Mr. States Circuit Court yesterday, Judges Bond and Seymour prediding, in the case known as alleges that he has been in and Seymour prediding, in the case known as a year conducting a circus, museum, menagof the Dorris & Colvin Colossal Show. The assets of the concern consist of wagons, horses, cars, animals of various descriptions, tents, ropes, riggings, poles, etc. Mr. Dorris alleged that it was impossible for the partners to agree business, the routes to be selected, the shot people to be employed, the system of advertising the show, etc. Being unable to agree it was desirable to separate and as both partners are non-residents of this State and creditors were pressing for payment the best interests of all parties would be served by the court appointing a receiver to wind up the business.

Mr. Colvin, the other partner, was represented by counsel, who stated that the appointment of a receiver would be satisfactory to him. The assets of the concern are valued at $15,000 and the appointment of an attorney, Rufus J. Deciano, as receiver would be acceptable to both parties.

The court made the order accordingly and directed the receiver to give bond in the sum of $25,000. The claims of all creditors will be filed with the Clerk of the Court.

Dissipation and Neglect.

A petition for divorce was filed to-day in th Circuit Court by Wilhelmine Wehrmann against Henry Wehrmann. They were mar-ried on the 5th of December, 1885, and the ried on the 5th of December, 1885, and the separation took place on the 28th of last January. Mrs. Webrmann alleges that she was a faithful and affectionate wife and did everything in her power to promote the comfort and happiness of her husband, but that he became dissipated and took to drinking, rendering her condition intulerable. His neglect of home was such that he utterly failed and refused to provide any means of support. When his wife was sick he neglected her shamefully, and she further alleges that he refused to pay the expenses of the children's funeral. Mrs. Wehrmann states that she was entirely dependent upon her own exertions, and she seeks a release from her self-imposed fetters, together with restoration of her maiden name, Wilhelmine Gerlemann.

Mrs. Margaret Kuehn objects to the verdic of the jury sgainst her in her slander sui against her father in law, and she presente to day in Judge Lubke's court a motion for to-day in Judge Lubke's court a motion for new trial supported by affidavits of persons who overhead the warm conversation, the subject matter of the case. Judge Dillon to-day is wrestling with the ev-idence in the appealed case from the Probate Court involving the claims of the widow of Al-bert Todd.

The Cunningham Will. The will of John C. H. Cunningham was ad-and seymour predicting, in the case known as the drummer's-tax case, brought about by a petition of A.W. Henderson for a writ of habeas corpus was adjudged that the petitioner be discharged. The State appealed. The petitioner Henderson was arrested by the Sheriff of Chowan County for selling goods without a license. He sued out a writ of nabeas corpus before Judge Bond and, at the hearing before the latter in Baltimore last summer, the case was continued to this term of the Court.

Thursday Evening, Dec. 1, 1887, CARLSBAD SPRUDEL SALT.

I shall giadly add my testimonial to your list indorsing the Carisbad Sprudel Saits as a remedia agent. Several years ago it was brought to my notice by a lady, to which she undoubtedly owed her life. Since then I have given it particular attention, and find in it a valuable remedy, especially so in cases of paralysis, chronic constitution and dyspepsis; and a very dear friend of mins has been wholly cured of an advanced stare of diabetes. I could give you a long list of such cures, but suffee it to say that I consider Carisbad Sprudel saits as invaluable remedy in all affections of the stomach, bowels, liver, spiece and kidners. I remain, vary sincersly,

EAST ST. LOUIS.

SUIT FOR $20,000 REVIVES AN OLD BANK SENSATION.

A suit for $20,000 was brought by Attorneys colbert and Cockrell in the Circuit Court at Belleville yesterday afternoon for the Directors of the East St. Louis Bank against Herman Eisenhardt of St. Louis, the bondsman of the Col. Meumann asserted his innocence of the he was still retained as Cashier. The loss, for which he was unable to account, worried him so, however, that he began to fall in health, and in a few months it became evident that his mental condition was such that retirement from active life was necessary. Urged by his friends to resign he did so, and Paul W. Abt was appointed Cashier in his stead. On last Friday Col. Meumann died, and there is no doubt that his death was due to worry over the inexplicable loss of the $8,000 from the bank vault. At the time the money was taken Col. Meumann informed a POST-DISFATCH reporter that he had his suspicion who took it, but he would not make them public unless asked by the Directors. Besides Col. Meumann, Mr. Frank B. Bowman, President of the Bank, and two assistant cashiers, Messrs. Boismenne and Ramsey, had access to the vault.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS. A Woman Put Under Hypnotic Influence

rom the London Standard. The amphitheater of the Charlte Hospital in Paris was on October 20 crowded with persons who had been invited to witness the experiments of hypnotism made by Dr. Luys, mem-ber of the Academy of Medicine and doctor at the Salpetriere. Before introducing Mile. ber of the academy of Medicine and doctor at the Salpetriere. Before introducing Mile. Esther, his subject, the Doctor showed his auditors photographs illustrating the effects produced on her in his laboratory. Mile. Esther was then brought forward.

By the means of magnetic passes the Doctor throws her from a state of lethargy into a cataleptic condition, and then into a state of incid somnambalism. Dr. Luys placed a tube containing hashisn on her neck, and she seemed instantly to feel the effect of the pareotic preparation. She assumed a natural air, and soon went straight toward Dr. Reclus, who was present, and proposed to perform the 'Mascotte' with him. The Doctor was rather annoyed by the preference shown him by Mile. Esther, so Dr. Luys diverted her attention from him to Dr. Segond, who consented to play the part of Pippo, while Mile. Esther took that of the Mascotte. He sat down beside her, whereupon she promptly kissed him. ''Now sing,' said Dr. Luys, holding the tube to her neck, and she begun art once, stopping short when the tube was withdrawn.

Dr. Luys then begged Dr. Reclus to place himself behind the young woman, and to put the tube on her neck-and then wradually take it away. Mile. Esther began again to sing; but in proportion as the tube was taken further and funther from her her voice became fainter and finiter till it died away entirely. She then fell, in a cataleptic condition, into the arms of the hospital assistants who were behind her.

Dr. Luys made other experiments upon Mile. Esther begged to prome the production of the hospital assistants who were behind her.

arms of the hospital assistants who were behind her.

Dr. Lays made other experiments upon Mile. Esther. By looking at her he made her follow with her eyes an imaginary bird in the air, and at last she thought she had caught it in her hands. Then, by making her look down the doctor frightened her by making her imagine there was a serpent at her feet.

The most remarkable display was when Dr. Lays placed a tube containing ten grammes of essence of thyme on Mile. Esther's neck. In a few moments her face became purple, her arms and hands stiff, and the neck swelled out in a most extraordinary manner. From 31 centimetres it grew, by the contraction of the muscles, to 35. The suffering seeined to be intense, and when the tube was taken away the patient was two minutes at least in a state of lethargy. Dr. Luys has for many years been studying hypnothin, and no one can for a moment imagine there is anything like charlatanism in his experiments.

English Mi:adies and American Chits. Honorable Mauds and Beatrices are sore at finding themselves outshone in the highest circles by American chits, who, before coming abroad, were just ordinary misses in small provincial towas in the United States. It is a bard case to be thrust into the shade by these fair layaders. But soreness about it will only spoil good looks. Way not rather learn the art of war from invading bells, who were not resered in hot-houses, but in public free schools? In a great degree they have conquered because they are in the habit of thinking themselves as good as no matter whom, and, of not being shamefaced in the presence of mortals of uppermest rank.

I don't think it occurs in the Mands and Beatrices that very few uppermost personages, in no matter what country, have, or can have, much conversation. Having had allowances from their cradles upward, there is no strenuous effort in their lives. And so that intensity of thought, feeling and will which makes a man a man and sublimates a woman, is wanting in them. Etiquette throws on them the onus of starting subjects of conversation. Having to talk de haut en bas, there is no cure in the fail back on buffoonery—a reason why Schneider's dressing-room at Les Varieties was "le Passage des Princes." License of speech is sure to be granted to any one whose talk tickies or is droll. There are few roschuls in etiquette-ridden counts who can so converse. But the United States free schools produce them in thousands. Originality in America is not confined to the uncomamental sex. The condition of the reason different there from what they are in Eugland and there is such emancipation from cant in most of the forms in which Honorable Mauds and Beatrices are sore at themselves outshone in the highest thousands. Originality in America is not confined to the unornamental sex. The conditions of life are so different there from what they are in Engiand and there is such emancipation from cant in most of the forms in which it tyrannizes us, that the beauty from Ohio, Illinois or Delaware is startfully novel, and whatever piquancy there is in her talk comes home with double force. There are such heaps of Miss Jenny Chamberlains in the United States, that hardly any one notices their points. Americans are astonished at the effect they produce on English noblemen when they come out at the Riviers or in London. As to the etiquette invented by Lord Chamberlains, those Thowers from over the Atlantic are in happy I-norance. So they start topics in colloquies with Royal personages instead of waiting for them to be started, and when they find they please they go ahead. The personages are not bored with hearing "Sir," or "Madam," or "Your Royal Highness" used as commas in the conversation of ordinary persons. Then the young and fair Americans neglect no advantage which is derived from attention to personal appearance. They know how to dress and they grudge no money that they can give to the best dentists. Being in the habit of dancing from infancy, their gestures are easy and not angular, and they always talk distinctly, and if sometimes with a slight twang. In an audble voice. Our girls often mumble or run on in a chirruping jabber that really is not speech. They too often dasi in set phrases which get soon exhausted. I think when a British girl is nice she's the nicest of any; and many more than there are could be charming if they could only learn how to speak and to move about in an easy, graceful way. The American girl has neat features, a delicate skin and a fine nervous system. But in the rest of the oranization nature has been wanting in senerosity. The Western woman to girl is a finer human being than the Eastern. In the Southern States womanhood is nearest to perfection. Women there are reposedul—not precisely am

FORENOON SESSION—CLOSING I P. M.

The boom is in the wheat and no mistake.
—Chicago deliveries were heavy of wheat, all going into carriers' hands, and light of corn and provisions.—New York to W. L.

Green: "Cables wheat higher in sympathy with American advices; corn very strong." To Small & Rasin 'Liverpool wheat steadier, with effirm feeling, good inquiry and few sellers." To Father Ewald: "Liverpool wheat steady, demand improving and holders offer moderately. Corn firm and demand fair." "London second cable weaker."—Liverpool's stook wheat decreased $45,000 bu during last month—Advices from Dekota say of the fall plowing not more than 80 per cent has been completed and the balance postponed until spring, which will tend to reduce the acreage of spring wheat from that of 1887. Threshing has been resumed since the cold spell stopped plowing.—The deliveries of wheat on December contracts were much heavier than expected. They were as follows: By Thos. Akin, 3:5,000 bu; W. T. Anderson & Co., 90,000; C. H. Albers & Co., 75,000; Grier Commission Company, 70,000; C. P. Burr & Co, 50,000; total, 610,000 bu. Of these, 210,000 went to J. W. Kauffman, the miller, and the balance was taken in and did not one support the market for sale, except 40,000 busyers of this cash wheat were principally millets, and the wheat delivered that was presented in the sould by Francis Bros., on call at 1746. Chicago, Lecember 1, 1 p. m.—Wheat opened strong and scored a half cent advance at the start. For some time afterward the market kept within a range of 4c, and, while it was small, the trading was very large. Shorts and buils eagerly sought the lines of long wheat that came on the market, and it was a combination of the balled-out condition the pit has been in for several days. At the top the volume of trade was immense and hard to follow.

The report of heavy realizing in New York freely circuiated, and had the effect of weakening our market 4c, but there are so many buils that the offering soon disappeared on the subsequent weak spot. We believe in accepting profits on advances like to-day's, and the long side wheat he market looks weak.

Corn joined in the buil movement with wheat, and opened with a bright trade. The advance brought in many shorts, while the buils were inclined to realize. The undertone of this market is strong, and we think the conditions are such as to put it up much higher.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., December 1 .- A welldressed couple crossed the Delaware by the Market street Ferry last evening and engaging a hack at Camden, drove to the residence of Rev. J. W. Bagiy. By invitation the hackman accompanied them into the house to marriage. The clergyman had noticed that both of the couple were nicely ressed, and that they seemed very nervous s quickly as possible. The groom was a fine-poking man, but the bride's features were concealed by a heavy veil, which she seemed in no hurry to remove. Mr. Bagly took out the marriage certificate book and began asking the usual questions. The groom gave his name as Joseph S. Ellem, 22 years of age, Englishman by birth, now living at Overbrook, Pa., and his occupation that of a groom. Turning to the bride, the preacher began to question her. In a mumbling, smothered kind of a voice she said her name was Emma Pye, 29 years of age, of Overbrook, and was employed at the same place as Ellem. The answers were satisfactory, but Mr. Bagly had his suspicions aroused by the woman keeping her veil down. He requested her to stand up before him in order to pronounce them man and wife, but before he began the ceremony he asked the bride to remove her veil. This she declined to do. Then Mr. Bagley said he would not proceed until she did so. She still objected, when the reverend gentleman pulled the veil over her head and, to his astonishment, discovered her face was covered by a gauze mask. Mr. Bagly was indignant, and he quickly tore the mask from the face of the woman, disclosing, as he termed it, "the face of a woman as black as the ace of spades."

The parties were ordered immediately from concealed by a heavy veil, which she seemed the ace of spades."

The parties were ordered immediately from the house. The groom-elect, however, was paralyzed with fear and asked the minister how much money it would take to keep the matter quiet: 'I would not shield you,' replied Mr. Bagly, "and," he added, "get out of this place immediately, or I will have you arrested.'

The couple hastly, left and drove as fast as they could to the ferry, where they caught a boat for Philadelphia. The hackman says he was innocent of all knowledge of the woman being colored, or else he might have driven them to the Olty Hall.

It was shown Mr. Ives by a reporter. He read it carefully, smiled his imperturable smile and said: "That is news to me."

MONTREAL, December 1 .- The Grand Trunk tied, after December 29 the Alian steamships will, as on a former occasion, quit running to Portland and make Baltimore their winter terminus. It appears that the point in dispute is the proportion of freight rates which each shall get, the steamship claiming a larger proportion than the railway people are willing to grant. The representatives of both companies have been conferring for days without arriving at a settlement. The Grand Trunk will have great difficulty in arranging with another regular line of steamers, but should the alian vessels go to Porfland a war of rates is certain to ensus.

ST. LOUIS' AGGREGATION OF WORLD-BEATERS PASSES INTO HISTORY.

The departure of Caruthers for his home last night has put an end to the negotiations for his signing with Brooklyn, for the present at least, but there is no doubt that he will not be in St. Louis next season. Foutz has been day's Post-Dispatch, but this will not interfere with the purchase of Caruthers by that city if the player can be induced to sign with Foutz, Caruthers, Gleason, Welch and Bushong. With these men out the old St. Louis Club is no more. Comiskey, Robinson, Latham and O'Nell are all that have been left of the once unconquerable aggregation, and it is doubtful if base ball will ever see its like again. The old club never knew what defeat neant until broken and crippled they met the Detroits last October. They won everything there was to win, and they were, par excellence, the ball club of the world. The St. Louis champions are no more, and no team that can be patched up from the leavings can possibly hope to hold its own among the giants

If St. Louis meets Detroit in the spring she will not win and she cannot hope to be better than third or fourth in the pennant race in Hereafter the gulf between the words "Champion" and "St. Louis" will be un-fathomable and impassable. The President of the club claims that he is acting for the best, and, of course, if an unconquerable team stands in the way of his own financial nterests, he is right in casting aside any sentimentality when it clashes with dollars and cents. The people of St. Louis, however, will mourn and they cannot be blamed for

A BASE BALL CORNER-STONE.

Through for the First Time. The Chicago and Philadelphia Cinbs were given a very hearty reception upon their arrival in San Francisco. After their street parade November 20 they entered the ball and anxious for the ceremony to be performed ground, where they were greeted by the enthusiastic cheers of 15,000 people. The pro-cession marched to the home base, where the cession marched to the home base, where the formality of the laying of a rubber home plate was to be gone through. The players formed into three sections, the Philadelphias to the right, the Chicagos to the left and the St. Louis Browns in front of the batter's box. Manager McNeil, of the Central Park grounds, then made a very appropriate speech of welcome to the Eastern professional base bail players, and wound up by saying: "The mere placing in position of this home-plate, which we are about to do, is in itself an insignificant affair, but the diamond is your temple and the home-plate is the corner-stone, and why should you not solemnize the laying of the home-plate as well as other professions and organizations do the laying of the corner-stones of their temples? The laying of this, the first rubber home-plate ever manufactured on the Pacific Coast, signalizes your advent to San Francisco, and we hope in the future to be able to look back to the event with satisfaction and pleasure. I claim that there is no institution in the United States doing more good for the rising generation than the game of base ball. There is not a boy in the land who is not ambitious to become a good base ball player, and good players must be temperate in their habits. In conclusion, I hope this winter's experience will prove so satisfactory to all concerned that you will be with us again next winter.

This is the first demonstration that has ever been made over the laying of a home plate on formality of the laying of a rubber home plate been made over the laying of a home plate on a base ball field.

BLIND BOYS PLAY BALL.

Prof. C. M. Woodward Describes a Very Pe-

Prof. C. M. Woodward, in the American Teacher, says: "When I was in Louisville, Ky., a while ago, I visited the 'Institution for the Blind.' While walking across the grounds I saw some boys under the trees playing with BOYS' REEFING JACKETS MADE TO a ball and bat. I asked: 'What boys are those? 'They are blind boys,' said the Su perintendent. 'But, what are they doing?' said I, thinking there must be some mistake. When he told me that the blind boys regularly played ball I could hardly believe him, and begged that I mignt be allowed to see them play. He said the boys would play after dinner for my special benefit. I spent the morning in the school and workrooms of the blind boys and girls, and I saw a great many wonderful things. One of the strangest of all was a kindergarten with blind pupils. They were making figures or patterns from a copy by putting plugs in holes. The plugs had square or round blocks on their ends But I set out to tell about the base ball, not the kindergarten, so I will skip the dinner and take you out under the trees where the game is to be played. Five or six of the best players were to play, and I believe that all but two of them were stone blind. The two could only see large objects, like the trunk of a tree, a man, or a gravel walk. I do not think they could see a ball on the ground or in the air.

"They took turns at the bat, and each one was anxious to make his bases. Their way of pitching and catching was this: The pitcher stood about six paces from the batter, while the catcher sat squarely on the ground limediately behind the bat. When all were ready the pitcher would count, 'One, two, three,' and gently toss the ball. The batter would at just the proper moment, swing his bat, and the catcher would spread out his hands and feet to stop the ball. He seemed to hear the ball as it passed the batter (and it generally did) and struck the ground, and yet perfectly blind! If he falled to stop the ball he would pursue it on his hands and feet as spry as a dog and almost as keen on its track. Either he could hear the ball roll along the grass, or he could juge from the nature of the surface and the known speed of the ball just how it would roll. His hands would sweep the grounds with great rapidly, and when he had the ball he would jump on his feet and rush for the home those?' 'They are blind boys,' said the Su said I, thinking there must be some mistake ilway and the Atlan Line of steamships have in our, and if the difficulty is not soon setthe Foot-ball Association of England. Previous to 1863 foot-ball was a game of many rules and practices, played differently in almost every school and county in Britain. The best rules then current were in use at Rugby, and these allowed running with the ball, hacking and tripping. In the association code these practices, as tending to make the game rougher than was desirable, were put a stop to, and the innovation caused a split in the association, and was the means of causing the clubs which played under the Rugby rules to withdraw. Some years afterward they formed an association, and its superiority is now unchallenged. The referee in each match is practically the representative of the association. He decides in all cases between the umpires, keeps a record of the same and acts as time-keeper. In October, 1871, the association introduced the challenge cup, the competition for which has evoked so much interest among the general public in England. The winners of the toss have the option of kick-off or choice of goals, the game to be commesced by a place kick from the center-of the ground, in the direction of the opposite goal line. The opposite side is forbidden to approach within ten yards of the bail until it is kicked. The goal is not won until the ball passes between the xoal-post under the bar without having been thrown, knocked or carried by one of the attacking side. Neither tripping, hacking nor jumping at a player is allowed, and no player shall use his hands to push or hold his adversary or charge him from behind. Association foot-ball played according to the rule is not a rough game. In Eugby rules if the ball touches an umpire or referee it is dead, and a scrummage has to be formed around the spot; but in the association rules the ball touching an umpire or referee is as live as ever, just as much so as if it had mersly touched the ground.

Clips and Chips.

George Moolle of Lawrence has signed with the New Orleans Club of the Southern League, which now holds the championship in that district.

"I think that I have had enough of managing a club," said Umpire Gaffney, the other day, "and hereafter my whole attention will be devoted to umpiring. To manage a club may be a pleasant business to some, but I don't want any more of it." don't want any more of it."

The old contract signed by certain of the members of the Washington team will be destroyed and the new style of obligation substituted. When the players signed they were given to understand that, in the event of the Brotherhood being recognized by the League, the new form of contract should be forthcoming. Other clubs, however, will hold their players over on the old contract.

The Millionaire's Opinion of the Handsomes y Telegraph to the Post-Disparch NEW YORK, December 1 .- The unfortunate misunderstanding between Col. Smith, who enjoys the distinction of being alluded to as the "handsomest man in the United States." and Mr. E. J. Ovington of Brooklyn, who is as handsome as Col. Smith, the details of which. telegraphed to the Post-Dispatch yesterday, afforded a choice bit of gossip. It was an absorbing topic of conversation in Brooklyn absorbing topic of conversation in Brooklyn yesterday. There were many picturesque and some vigorous expressions in the correspondence that passed between the two gentlemen over the matter of the $180 expenses which Col. Smith desired to collect from Mr. Ovington for going to Louisville to act as best man for the 60-year old millionaire on the occasion of his recent marriage to the beautiful 18-year-old Miss Malzee. Mr. Ovington was very much surprised that Col. Smith should wish to charge him expenses in the performance of such a delicate service, but if it was to be so he thought $100 was about the correct figure, intimating his unwillingness to pay for a suit of clothes for Col. Smith's final communication, after accepting on account Mr. Ovington's $100 check, courteously remarks: "It is impossible to imagine men bred elsewhere than in china-shops with such crude notions of decency," and concludes with "I remand you to the shop-keeping limbo from which I lifted you."

More Than Three Hundred Holders o Treasurer's Certificates for Full-Paid Subscriptions Will Have No Voice in Next Tuesday's Election Because They Have Not Had Their Stock Issued—An Unexpected Decision of the Directors-Backed by Law - The Custom Hereto

tions last year and the year before.

THE BOARD'S POSITION The position taken by the Board of Directors mpany are not stockholders, although they nave paid the full amount of their subscri tion, because they have never exchanged the Treasurer's receipt for the actual stock. In other words, A and B, having paid $5,000 each to the Treasurer of the St. Louis Exposition and Music Hall Association for 400 shares of the stock of the association, are dis-tinguished in the eyes of the inspectors of the election because A has one through the formality of exchanging his spectors of the election because A has gone through the formality of exchanging his Treasurer's receipt for a certificate of stock and B has forgotten or neglected to go through that formality. A therefore is permitted to vote while B is debarred from voting because he is not a "stockholder of record," and B is not permitted to go through the formality of exchanging his receipt for a stock certificate now because the st-ck-books are closed and cannot be opened before the election.

The way this state of affairs came to exist is about as follows: When the Exposition stock was subscribed a payment of 50 per cent of its face value, or $12.50 a share, was required of all subscribers. The Treasurer of the Association gave printed receipts for the amount of each subscription paid. At the end of about a year, when the building was well under way, a call was made on the stockholders for the other 50 per cent of the subscription. This money was paid in and in return for it the Treasurer issued receipts which stated on their face that they were exchangeable for stock at the office of the association. Many of the stockholders paid in the balance of their subscriptions and then forgot or neglected to have the stock issued. They held the Treasurer's certificates showing that they had subscribed and paid up so many shares of stock and to all intents and purposes they were stockholders of the association. The Directors recognized this fact and permitted it hese subscribers to vote at every election. This involved some little trouble, some little inconvenience to the inspectors of election. In addition to the examination of the stock ledger they were, in many instances, obliged to go through the Treasurer's receipt-book to ascertain whether or not certain stock which wanted to vote had been paid up.

THE INJUSTICE OF IT.

A few weeks go the Directors met and discussed this question. They had notified the holders of these certificates at various times to come in and get their stock. Many of them had done so, but many had not. T him expenses in the performance of such a delicate service, but if it was to be so he thought $100 was about the correct figure, intimating his unwillingness to pay for a suit of clothes for Col. Smith, as well as for the transportation. Col. Smith, as made a commence of the first of the subscribers to the shop-keeping on account Mr. Ovington's $100 cheek, courteously remarks: 'It is impossible to imagine men bred elsewhere than in china-shops with such crude notions of decency,'' and concludes with 'I remand you to the shop-keeping limbo from which I tifted you.'

MR. Ovington TALKS.

Mr. Ovington is the senior member of the firm of Ovington Brothers, who conduct a large importing and general business in china-waie, bric-a-brac, etc., in Broodlyn. As already stated, though elderly, he is a fine-looking man, tall, well-built, with handsome features and a neatly-trimmed must-che. There was fire in his eyes when the Posr-Distance in the process of the correspondent's question if he desired. The protectors had no right to open the privilege of voting in the election to come.

BARRED OUT.

A curious question has arisen in connecti with the Exposition election. Three hundred gentlemen and ladies who subscribed to the scriptions, or as many of the 300 as take an active interest in the election, will go to the Exposition building December 6 to find themselves disfranchised. They will be informed that under a ruling of the Board of Directors, backed up later by a legal opinion, they are, without notification, denied the right to participate in the election of the men who, for the next year, are to manage their property. The Exposition is the property of the holder of a single share of stock as well as of the large shareholder. His property interest is proportioned to his stockholding, but his rights are as strong, whatever his interest may be. The Board of Directors has denied to some stockholders this year the rights which are accorded other stockholders, and which were accorded to all under the same condi-

following:

J. H. Johnston, Esq.:

DEAR SIR—You ask me what stockholders are entitled to vote. I answer, every stockholder whose name appears on the transfer books, namely on the stock books of the company. Very truly yours,

See section 716, volume 1, Revised Statutes, page 119.

St. Louis, November 12, 1887.

It will be seen that this communication was sent November 13, or six days after the time when voters could qualify. It was them impossible for certificate-holders, even if they had been notified, to make the exchange of their Treasurer's certificates for certificates of stock; and they were not even notified of the situation. Secure in the possession of their certificates, many of these gentlemen will go to the pulls on Tuesday next to find that they have no standing its stockholders, and that, fortified by Judge McKeighan's letter, the inspectors will refuse the votes which they have expected to cast.

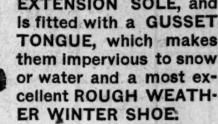

MR. M'KRIGHAN

was seen at his office this morning by a Post-Dispatch reporter and asked on what he based his opinion that the holders of certificates could not be classed as stockholders.

"Secretary Johnston came in some time ago and asked me that question," said Mr. McKeighan, "and without consulting the law I said that these subscribers were entitled to vote. This seemed equitable, but when I consulted the law I had to reverse my opinion. The statute is very plain. It says:

SECTION 716. Qualification of voters, how tested—Shall not vote, when.—At every election of directors the transfer books of the corporation shall be produced to test the qualifications of the voters, and no person shall be admitted to vote, directly or by proxy, except those in whose names it be shares of the stock of the

WAS asked whether the holders of these certificates had been notified that they would not was asked whether the holder so these sectificates had been notified that they would not be allowed to vote.

"I do not know that they were," said he, "but we had notified them several times that they ought to take out their stock."

"Still, they had been allowed to vote before, and they were not notified now that they would not be allowed to vote hereafter."

"We published an announcement that the books would close on a certain day; that is all. We would like to do anything we can for these stockholders, but can we do anything?"

Secretary Johnston stated that about three hundred and ten of the l,900 stockholders had not returned their Treasurer's receipts for cancellation. He did not think their vote would affect the result of the coming election. He had obtained Judge McKeishan's opinion for his own protection on the day of election.
